

WILSON GIVES GERMAN NOTE CLOSE ATTENTION

President Keeps in Constant Touch With Secretary Lansing and Is Expected to Return to Washington Soon.

Washington, July 15.—The president in a dispatch to Secretary Tamm said that he would return to the capital soon. The supposition is that he will be in Washington the last of the week and that the United States reply to the German note will be considered at Tuesday's cabinet meeting.

The president's telegram was given out as a White House statement and ended rumors concerning his attitude toward the German reply. It indicated that the president had reached no decision as to the policy of the government, and it is believed to have been called forth by statements that he already had made up his mind and that he did not view the situation as seriously as some of his advisers.

The statement said the president was giving the German note his closest attention, keeping constantly in touch with Secretary Lansing, and that as both had maturely considered the situation, the president would return personally to confer with Lansing and the cabinet, after which there would be as prompt an announcement as possible of the purposes of the government.

Before the president returns Count von Bernstorff, the German ambassador, will call on Secretary Lansing to explain at length the viewpoint of his government. The ambassador recommended to his foreign office the inclusion in the last note of those paragraphs expressing the hope that the United States and Germany would work together for the adoption of the principle of freedom of the seas. He places much significance on the expressed willingness of Germany to follow the lead of the United States on this question and thinks that the way is thereby open for the United States to mediate the entire controversy on the rules of maritime warfare as they affect neutral rights.

NEW U. S. SUBMARINE TO MAKE LONG CRUISE

Undersea Craft Will Be Able to Cross the Atlantic Ocean and Return to New York Without Stopping for Fuel.

New York, July 15.—A submarine that can cross the Atlantic ocean and return to New York without stopping for fuel is soon to be added to the United States navy. The new boat, the G-3, is undergoing final tests at the plant of the Lake Torpedo Boat Co. of Bridgeport, Ct. Its builders, it has proved a cruising radius of 5,500 miles at a speed of 11 knots an hour. At a lower rate of speed it can go even farther without replenishing its supply of fuel. Seven other submarines are under construction at the Lake Torpedo Boat Co.'s yards. They are even more up to date than the G-3. They have the same wide cruising radius. They will cost $545,000 apiece. The G-3 cost $450,000. Hitherto all United States submarines have been propelled by gasoline on the surface and by electricity under it.

All the new boats burn heavy oil. They are equipped with a Swiss engine. In tests the G-3 showed a speed of 14.7 knots an hour on the surface and 10.7 submerged. The Swiss engines for the G-3 had to be imported. They were installed at the Brooklyn navy yard recently. The Swiss designs have been secured, however, and hereafter the entire submarine can be made in this country. The United States government is keeping the specifications of the new engines a secret.

"We will have all the new submarines finished on time," Simon Lake said. "When they are finished they will be a match for any submarines in the world."

ITALIANS SCORE OVER THEIR FOE

Capture Two Miles of Austrian Trenches in the Carnic Alps.

London, July 15.—The Italians have captured two miles of Austrian trenches in the Carnic Alps, according to a dispatch received from Villach, an Austrian town on the border. The 52 miles northwest of Laibach. The Alpine troops, these advisers say, dragged their artillery to the heights near Roskofel, which is situated at an altitude of 6,000 feet. The Italians also are said to have captured two important ports south of Gorizia.

The German official statement just issued announces that German forces on the western front captured French positions in the forest of the Argonne for a width of three kilometers (1.8 mile) and for a depth of one kilometer, and that they also stormed Hill 255. The Germans claim they made 2,581 prisoners, took two field cannons and rendered eight cannon useless.

Say Germans Are Halted. The latest French official statement claims German attacks in the Argonne were definitely stopped. After a heavy bombardment the Germans attempted the recapture of the trenches near Pilleken, taken by the British July 5, but were easily repulsed, according to the Paris statement.

There is a momentary lull along the entire eastern front. The activity the Austro-German army has been showing in northern Poland is believed to be veiling a comprehensive rearrangement of troops. It is not believed the calm will last long, as it never was more necessary than now for the Germans to act with promptitude if they hope to attain any decisive success.

In the Courland and Kovno governments for some time past the Germans have shown no determination to advance. The line across which the antagonists face one another begins at Pavlosk harbor, about 25 miles north of Libau, and follows the Rivers Windau, Wenta and Dubissa to the Nieman. In the neighborhood of Osawiec there are signs the Teuton army has more serious intentions, as it has been reinforcing with artillery.

Fortify Constantinople.

German engineers are strengthening the defenses of Constantinople on a huge scale, according to advices through Mytilene, received in London.

Berlin reports that during the month of June 29 British, 3 French, 1 Belgian and 9 Russian merchantmen were sunk by German submarines. The total loss of the entente allies by submarines, including fishing steamers, which mostly were armed patrol boats, aggregated 125,000 tons, it is claimed. The captain and four members of the crew of the Swedish schooner Daisy were killed when the vessel was sunk by a mine off Froljants light-house, according to a Reuter dispatch from Stockholm.

When it was opened a burning fuse was less than an inch from the explosive. The package was delivered by a well-dressed woman. It was received by B. Miller, clerk at the St. Francis.

Health Officers Meet.

Sandusky, O.—A more effective warfare against tuberculosis was urged by speakers during the conference of the state board of health with Sandusky health authorities at Hotel Breakers, Cedar Point. In many communities, it was charged, efforts to combat the white plague have been lax, while in some little attention has been paid to it.

"Our country's greatest need today is a more effective propaganda against tuberculosis," said Dr. H. T. Sutton, president of the state board.

Alcohol Distilleries Aid to German Agriculturalists.

The importance that alcohol distilleries may assume in scientific agriculture is pointed out in a recent professional paper published by the U. S. Department of Agriculture under the title of "Agricultural Alcohol; Studies of its Manufacture in Germany." The results of the author's study indicate that the manufacture of alcohol for technical purposes, not for human consumption, is not regarded in itself as a profitable business but as a necessary factor in general farming. The distilleries provide a market for Germany's enormous potato crop, which in turn has made possible the profitable cultivation of large tracts of light sandy soil in the east. The spent mash again is returned to the farmers from the distilleries and used as feed for cattle which furnish manure for the enrichment of the soil. On account of the pressure of the population and the desire to cultivate as large an acreage as possible German farmers have not been raising as much live stock as would be good agricultural practice, and anything that tends to stimulate them in this direction is regarded as most desirable.

Approximately six thousand potato distilleries are now in operation in the German empire. Many of these are co-operative distilleries in which it is interesting to note that the co-operators do not hold shares having a certain money value, but possess the privilege of calling daily for a certain quantity of spent mash. To the potato crop itself an eighth of the arable land in the German empire is now devoted and the production is enormous.

In some instances crops of more than 535 bushels per acre have been harvested, while yields of 300 to 375 bushels are quite common. Although such yields are produced only under favorable circumstances, it seems obvious that the total yields can be very considerably increased if new uses for alcohol can be discovered to create the necessary demand. At the present time in the eastern provinces it is the price of spirits which regulates the price of potatoes.

The Live Stock of Fong Tay

By James Francis Dwyer. Copyright Paget Newspaper Service.

Fong Tay sat in the little green grocery and puzzled over the mystery which encompassed him. Fong was nervous and unstrung. His small eyes blinked behind the large horn spectacles as he peered through the window at the sidewalk beyond. His lean brown hands twisted nervously around each other as if their own considered the movement helpful to the wondering mind that wrestled with the mystery. But Fong's brain was not equal to the task.

The mystery centered on a bag of potatoes that Fong had placed on the sidewalk near the door of his shop. His experience of potato bags was large and varied, but this particular bag was an exception. Its actions were erratic and very distressing to the nerves of the Chinaman. It had been placed in a reclining position against the wall of the shop at an angle of sixty degrees, yet ten minutes after it had been placed there, it had raised itself upright, stood for a few seconds in a perpendicular position and then fell forward, spilling the potatoes into the gutter!

The Chinaman was astounded. There was no one within a ten yard radius of the bag; its contents were new potatoes which Fong had sorted with his own hands; there was no visible agency by which the movement could be affected, and yet he had seen the bag deliberately raise itself and fling the spuds into the gutter. Fong stood staring stupidly at the nearly empty bag till his sense of thrift recalled him from the realms of conjecture. The little shop was situated upon a slight rise, and the potatoes that fell in the gutter were scampering wildly down the hillside, as the Chinaman started in pursuit.

Two boys who had been sitting on the opposite side of the street helped in the chase. They gathered up the runaway vegetables and carried them back to the shop, and Fong rewarded them with a present of six bananas. The bag was put back in its old position, but this time the Chinaman leaned it at a still greater angle, so that a possibility of a repetition of the occurrence was made more remote. To Fong Tay's mind the happening was a remarkable one. If the bag had fallen sideways in the first instance it would not have startled him, but his astonishment arose from the fact that it had first attained a perpendicular position before falling outward. With his gaze fixed upon the erratic bag he packed into the shop and then watched it through the window.

It was at this juncture that Fong's thoughts flew to the joss. The fat god who sat contentedly behind the little stick of burning incense, was the proper person to grapple with the mystery. The Chinaman was aware of his own limitations, but he knew that the power of the joss was unmatchable. With a solemn prayer he pulled himself into the inner room and made a fervent plea for protection to the fat deity. The god was smiling peacefully, and Fong's nerves relaxed somewhat under the influence of the smile. Surely the joss would protect him. Fong had been a faithful devotee, and it was right that the incense sniffing deity extend help to the terror-stricken worshipper. After praying he shuffled back into the shop and looked out fearfully through the window.

The sight that met his eyes made him grasp hastily at the counter for support. For the second time the bag lifted itself without visible aid, balanced itself a second and then spurted its contents into the gutter. But that was not all. Fong's gurgling of horror was strangled by the subsequent happening. A basket containing tomatoes, that stood beside the potato bag, moved swiftly toward the edge of the sidewalk and imitated the action of the bag by tipping its contents into the street.

Fong collapsed. He sat in the doorway and wept bitterly while the two boys chased the runaway vegetables down the hill. Light was beginning to dawn upon the Chinaman's mind, but the coming of knowledge did not lessen the tremendous fear that gripped him. He knew now that it was the spirit of his mother's cousin that was causing the trouble! The cousin had been dead some months, but before he died he had cursed Fong in a most strenuous manner, and the Celestial was sure that the erratic actions of his vegetables were the result of spirit vengeance.

Fong shrieked imprecations to the god. He promised to double the daily supply of incense. He promised offerings of various kinds, but the joss gave no intimation that he would take the matter in hand. He smiled with calm indifference up his fear-stricken worshipper, till, finally, Fong became annoyed. With distressed eyes he turned upon the image and abused it. He called it epithets that he had never dared call it. He cast insinuations upon its power to control the spirit of the dead cousin, and finally he threatened it. He picked up the chopper that lay upon the meat block and threatened to smash the joss to atoms if the annoying spirit was not immediately chased outside a thousand-mile radius of the establishment. Fong's action amounted to unqualified blasphemy, but fear had driven him mad. After making the threat he returned to the shop and peered out.

All was quiet with the array of baskets and crates upon the sidewalk, and for a moment Fong thought that the threat had put the joss upon his mettle. Then a startling occurrence took place. A barrel containing apples slid quickly along the pavement and fell into the gutter. A small basket of turnips followed it hastily, and a well-filled bag made a sudden somersault and covered the sidewalk with a layer of green peas.

The Chinaman gave a wild yell of rage. Rushing to the door he slammed and locked it so that the spirit of his tormentor could not enter the shop, then swinging the meat chopper he dashed into the inner room to take his revenge upon the joss that had turned a deaf ear to his prayers.

The two boys seeing the disturbance among the vegetables again crossed the street in expectation of more bananas, but when they saw Fong shut the door they stopped and looked guiltily at each other. From inside the shop came wild yells and their fear increased. Hastily removing three fish-hooks from the barrel, basket and bag, they fled around the corner, windlag as they ran the fish lines with which, while sitting on the other side of the street, they had caused the peculiar movements among Fong Tay's stock.

Next day the landlord of the little green grocery found that his tenant had fled, and he wondered much over the battered remnants of the joss that he found in the inner room. Fong had fled before the wrath of the dead cousin, but the two boys with the fish hooks and line were regretting his departure.

A NICE MAN.

"Your husband is such a nice man, Mrs. Burtonby," said her caller, accepting another cup of tea and a peanut butter sandwich and a macaroon and a lady finger. "Your good fortune is the talk of the neighborhood, really."

"If you ever marry again, my dear," replied Mrs. Burtonby, "take my advice and marry a ward boss or a loan shark or a man who robs the public, but don't ever marry a nice man."

"You astonish me! Isn't your life with Mr. Burtonby a happy one?"

"Perfectly, but his being 'such a nice man' adds to the high cost of living. The next time I marry I shall look out for a pirate or a second-story worker."

"Doesn't he treat you well?"

"Perfectly, but what I am trying to convey is that the world is not yet good enough for a nice man to live in. Just to show you: It hasn't been a month since Mrs. Grabmore asked him to loan her our lawn mower, and he took it right over there and, because she shed a crocodile tear at being all alone in the world, he remained right there and mowed her lawn for her, and it is half as large as an ordinary city block, and that isn't the worst of it. He broke a jardiniere which had a fern in it and she permitted him to pay for it. Yet Mrs. Grabmore could buy out ten times over."

"What an outrage!"

"Then the other night when Mr. Burtonby had promised to take me and the children to town for supper at the hotel and for a long auto ride afterward, Dr. Vandoele phoned over that he had some relatives coming in on the nine o'clock train, and wouldn't Mr. Burtonby pick him up and call for him in our auto? Mr. Burtonby would, in spite of the fact that the same street car line which passes the depot also passes Dr. Vandoele's home. I gave the children a picked-up supper and put them to bed broken-hearted, and my husband gallanted across town to meet some people who never came, then at Dr. Vandoele's suggestion took Dr. and Mrs. Vandoele for a long ride in the country. Washington from several sources, indicates that the proposed amnesty will not be accepted by the most formidable of the forces opposed to Carranza.

"Darling," whispered the ardent suitor, "I lay my fortune at your feet."

"Your fortune?" she replied in surprise. "I didn't know you had one."

"Well, it isn't much of a fortune, but it will look large beside those tiny feet."

ORDER PREVAILS IN CAPITAL OF MEXICO

Food Supplies Arrive and Arrangements Are Being Made to Feed 10,000 Destitute of the City.

Washington, July 15.—State department advices from Mexico City reported the capital quiet with absolute order prevailing and trains arriving from Vera Cruz with food supplies. Stores and banks had not been re-opened pending arrangements for currency circulation. Communication between the capital and Vera Cruz by rail and telegraph continued, and the Carranza government departments were said to be under process of organization as rapidly as possible. Consul General Shanklin cabled that Gen. Gonzales had given preference to provision trains over troop trains and that arrangements for soup kitchens to relieve the capital's destitute were progressing with the hope that it would be possible to feed from 8,000 to 10,000 daily.

Additional dispatches confirm the report that the Carranza forces in control of the city had recaptured the waterworks from the retreating Zapata army and that danger of a water famine had been averted.

In the meantime activity of Gen. Villa's forces in pressing a lively campaign toward Mexico City from the north, reports of which continue to reach Washington from several sources, indicates that the proposed amnesty will not be accepted by the most formidable of the forces opposed to Carranza.

In view of this situation, with the possibility that Gen. Gonzales may be forced into another battle for possession of the capital with Gen. Villa's army, there is little talk here for the present extension of moral support or recognition to any faction by the United States.
